

ANNIVERSARY

June 2010

A few weeks before my wedding day I was informed that it would soon become just another day. I argued that such complacency would never overtake the day I was married. Such feelings, I thought, would diminish the occasion.

Here I am, 32 years later, and I'm proud to say the other person was totally mistaken. Our wedding anniversary hasn't been relegated to the storage bins of our lives. It remains a wonderful moment to celebrate.

Don't get me wrong, the frivolity has diminished. I mean, we haven't saved a piece of wedding cake to nibble on every year (yuck!) and we were married in the pre-video days so the memories are only in our minds, but we do have an audio cassette of the ceremony which we play now and then. However, I must admit it was hard to find a cassette player the last time we listened so we sat in our oldest car and cherished the moment all over again!

We were so young, almost, but not quite, 21. The tuxes were an awful color called camel...except for mine which was white with tails. It made my backside look even larger! My bride, Ann, is as beautiful today as she was then, the major difference is that her long, flowing hair has been short for years.

In this world of hooking up and Hollywood romance, we're not alone. We're honored to be in the company of millions of others who still are delighted to celebrate the anniversary of their first and only wedding.

A successful marriage requires falling in love many times, always with the same person.

Mignon McLaughlin – American journalist/author

MOVING PEOPLE FORWARD!

Learn more online at www.intercommgroup.com

Terry consults and coaches on Leadership, Teams and Performance. He is a member of the National Speakers Association. To book him for your company or organization, email: terry@intercommgroup.com © 2010 InterComm Group LLC. May be used with inclusion of InterComm Group name and web link.